PRACTICAL, RESEARCH-BASED TRAINING FOR REAL-WORLD CORRECTIONS CHALLENGES

Research shows that occupational stress can significantly impact the health, well-being, and effectiveness of corrections staff. To perform their duties effectively, support public safety, and promote rehabilitation, staff wellness must be intentionally and systematically addressed.

WHAT SETS US APART

CORRECTIONS-SPECIFIC

Our courses are designed specifically for corrections staff and their adult family members. They focus on issues unique to this population and are grounded in research, extensive training, and clinical experience with corrections personnel and their families.

DATA-DRIVEN

Our courses are grounded in research conducted by Desert Waters and other studies with corrections staff across all roles. They also draw on findings from related populations, including the military and other first responders.

WHOLISTIC

Our courses promote whole-person wellness—soul, body, and spirit—and whole-system health for custody and civilian staff, leaders at all levels, and family members, with an emphasis on supporting individual, team, and organizational well-being.

PREVENTION-ORIENTED

Our courses equip staff with practical skills to create healthy workplace environments and proactively manage job-related stress before it becomes a problem.

TRAUMA-RESPONSIVE

Our courses go beyond being trauma-informed, offering strategies, skills, and practices to address the effects of traumatic stress and promote wellness at the individual, team, and organizational levels.

SKILLS-BASED

Our courses provide practical, actionable strategies that staff can apply to address challenges in both their professional and personal lives.
